Episode & Cultural Recap

In the Season 1 finale of The Tuttle Twins, Ethan, Emily, and Karinne travel to the year 3000. They discover a rigid, dystopian society where the government controls every detail of daily life, from what people eat to what they think. Surprisingly, the supreme ruler of this future is a 25-year-old version of Grandma Gabby. She started out wanting to help people and fix society's problems, but she ended up using force instead of persuasion.

Core Cultural Idea. Every human culture faces a choice between force (controlling people through fear, strict rules, and power) and persuasion (respecting free will, convincing others with truth, and allowing people to make their own choices).

Vocabulary Check

- In the episode, Grandma Gabby warns the twins that even leaders with the best _____ can create terrible problems when they try to control everyone.
- God created every human being in His own _____ (Genesis 1:27), which means people have dignity and the God-given ability to make real decisions.
- God does not use _____ to make people love Him. Instead, He invites us to follow Him freely out of love and truth.
- When a culture tries to fix sin or bad behavior only by making more rules, it forgets that real change must happen in a person's _____ (Ezekiel 36:26).
- Ethan realizes that when people have the freedom to make their own _____, they learn to solve their own problems and help their neighbors.
- Grandma Gabby reminds the kids that the _____ is not locked in stone. It changes based on the faithful, wise decisions we make today.

Scripture & Culture Comparison

Read each Bible verse and answer how it applies to the episode's message about protecting the future.
2 Corinthians 3:17 (NKJV) — "Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

- Cultural Question. Young Gabby tried to create a "perfect" world by taking away everyone's liberty. Why does true peace come from God's Spirit working inside people rather than human rulers controlling them from the outside?

4 Ways Children Can Protect the Future
To keep a culture free, healthy, and honoring to God, young people need to practice these four habits right now:

- Guard Truth Over Trends. Stand up for what is true and right according to God's Word, even when culture pressures you to go along with the crowd.
- Use Persuasion, Not Bossiness. Treat siblings, friends, and classmates with patience. Win people over with kindness and good ideas rather than bullying or tattling to get your way.
- Practice Self-Government. Learn to rule your own temper, time, and choices under God's guidance. People who cannot govern themselves often end up demanding that the government control everyone else.
- Serve Your Community Freely. Look for ways to help neighbors, start small projects, or solve problems in your own home and church without waiting for someone in power to fix everything.
